NEXT MOVE IN DOUBT

New Polar Committee Has No Definite Plan in View.

COPENHAGEN TRIP ABANDONED

National Geographic Society, in Fairness to Dr. Cook, Chooses New Board of Experts to Inspect His Claims, but Fails to Instruct Them. Commander Peary Reaches Town.

Apparently a lull is the next thing on the programme in the National Geographic Society's search for the truth about the Cook-Peary controversy.

Although the board of managers at a meeting yesterday in the Hubbard Memorial Building appointed a new committee to decide "whether or not any one reached the north pole prior to 1909," it is generally conceded that the members do not intend to go to Copenhagen. When the records will be placed at their disposal anywhere else is a matter of uncertainty.

Prof. Willis L. Moore, president of the National Geographic Society, said last night he didn't see the use of having the committee go to Copenhagen if it wasn't to be allowed to see anything when it got there, and the members seemed to take much the same philosophic view of it. From the indications now, they are to play a waiting game, and to be ready to catch anything on the fly that is thrown at their scientific heads. Further than that there is no plan at this writing to corral the original records for a private, family conference, and the society still adheres to its determination not to have anything to do with copies.

Board of Experts Chosen.

The committee appointed yesterday consists of J. Howard Gore, formerly professor of mathematics at George Washington University, and author of several works on surveying and geodesy; Rear Admiral John E. Pillsbury, U. S. N., for ten years in charge of the hydrographic office of the Navy, and for several years assistant chief of the Bureau of Navigation of the Navy Department, and Dr. C. Willard Hayes, chief geologist of the United States Geological Survey, and one of the pioneer explorers of Alaska and many Rocky Mountain districts.

No member of the newly appointed committee served on the committee that passed on the Peary records. This was decided to be the course fairest to Cook. Among the 55,000 members of the National Geographic Society are many ardent supporters of the Brooklyn explorer, and those in charge of the investigation maintain they shall have no cause to complain of the manner in which the records of Dr. Cook are examined.

The authority under which the committee was appointed was vested in a previous resolution, providing that the committee of research recommend to the board of managers a subcommittee of experts with authority to "send for papers or make such journeys as may be necessary to inspect original records." In its own discretion it will interrogate persons claiming to have information bearing on the controversy, and will view any original data it can lay its hands on, and make any trips it finds advisable. Prof. Moore said, in regard to the committee's plans:

"But as long as the University of Copenhagen has seen fit to deny us the courtesy we asked of them, I don't see any reason why the committee should go to Copenhagen."

No Action on Chester's Speech. Prof. Moore refused to say anything in regard to the possibility of official action by the society in regard to Rear Admiral C. M. Chester's address at the university Saturday night, in which he called Dr. Cook a "faker." It is understood the strong stand taken by the admiral has caused considerable whispering and wagging of heads, and although it is explained that the statement was simply his personal view, there is a possibility of some sort of action by the Geographic Society. No action was taken at the meeting yesterday.

Although an industrious attempt was made yesterday by several newspaper men to get a tart reply to Admiral Chester's statements out of other admirals of the navy, the service refused to embroil itself. For the time being, at least, there will be no trouble in the naval ranks to figure as a satellite to the main soiree. Admiral Schley said he would have to be excused from saying anything, and Admiral Brownson simply shook his head as much as to say his ship was painted white.

The committee of experts will get together some time in the future and look wisely in the direction of Copenhagen; but so far no definite plans for meetings have been made.

The Peary party, the members of his cabinet, the diplomatic corps, and many others have been invited to attend the lecture to be given here on Friday night by Commander Peary, under the auspices of the National Geographic Society. Secretary of State Knox, Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel, and the British and the French Ambassadors have said they would attend.

Missionary May Return.

Reports from the American Legation at Lisbon indicate that the Portuguese government will permit the return of Rev. Wesley M. Stover, an American missionary, to Portuguese Africa, whence he was expelled last year on charges of committing acts contrary to Portuguese sovereignty. The authorities charged that Mr. Stover incited the natives to rebel against the local authorities.

SALOON LICENSES PENDING.

None Will Be Issued Until Police Have Investigated.

Licenses to liquor-selling establishments will probably not be issued for several weeks. This time is necessary for the police to make thorough investigation as to the observance of the excise laws by these establishments during the last year. Assessor Richards, chairman of the excise board, said that as soon as the police reports on the 514 retail and 125 wholesale establishments are received the board will take up the work of issuing the licenses. To those against whom the police make no complaints licenses will be issued at once. Saloons against which the police lodge complaints will be given a hearing by the excise board before that body renders its decision.

Georgetown From Will Be Held at the Arlington, December 1.

Manager Byrns, of the Georgetown University Crew Association, announces the annual crew prom, for the benefit of aquatic sports at the hilltop institution, will be held this year on Wednesday evening, December 1, in the ball room of the Arlington Hotel.

This dance is one of the big school events of the scholastic year, and many of Washington's elite society will be present to act as chaperons.

From a financial standpoint, the affair has always proved a success. Manager Byrns is at present arranging all minor details and expects the dance this year to eclipse any that have been heretofore given, both as regards the number who shall attend and also the funds, which will go to the aid of the crew.

This is in nowise a college affair, but is given for all members of the university, and every student is asked to attend, whether he be from the college, law, medical, or dental school. Invitations will be out in the next week, and all university men are urged to be present at the prom.
